Cookies and Privacy

Cookies are small text files that are placed on your computer by websites that you visit.

The McLean Museum / Inverclyde Archives Collections Online website uses anonymous cookies to function. It will not work without them. You may delete and block all cookies from this site, but the site will not work.

The Collections Online website uses first party session cookies (which are temporary and are erased when you close your browser at the end of your surfing session). The cookies used by Collections Online store navigation information during your visiting session, like the previous search, which screen of Search Results you're on, etc.. There is no personal information stored in these cookies. These cookies are erased when the browser is closed, and they are regenerated every time the internet user re-enters The Collections Online site in a new browser. There are no third-party cookies or tracking cookies.

These first-party session cookies give us information about the searches performed on their site. We use these cookies to anonymously enhance your experience of the site. No personal information about service users is stored.

We do not store any information that would, on its own, allow us to identify individual users of this site.
